Here and There

Editorial By ALEX. H. WASHBURN

WAR between Italy and Ethiopia is conceded to be certain as Emperor Selassie dispatches additional troops to his frontier to meet the oncoming Italians. Why is Great Britain making such strenuous efforts to halt Italy? Will there be another World war as a result of the Ethiopian campaign? How does America stand to be affected? These are interesting questions touched on by the August 31st letter of the Administrative & Research Corporation, 120 Wall St. N. Y., which has come to my desk.

Labor Forecasts Stout Support of Roosevelt in 1936

Organization Leaders
Very Definite in Their Labor Day Speeches

LOYAL TO FRIENDS

Green, A. F. of L. Head, and Lewis, Miners' Leader,
Uphold F. D. R.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—Resounding speeches by labor leaders gave the country with varying degrees of foreboding Monday a broad hint that they approved of Franklin D. Roosevelt as president.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said in careful language that the basis for a "better social and economic order has been laid."

Frank Morrison, secretary, related in his Labor day address that in 1906 the federation had adopted the policy of standing by its friends and opposing its enemies. He outlined four new laws which he said were enacted through the aid of friends in house and senate and because "President Franklin D. Roosevelt insisted."

For Roosevelt

But the most positive statement was that of John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. He said:

"Organized labor is the contest that is to come has no choice but to support the president morally, with his votes and with its financial power. Of the result there can be no doubt. A grateful people in appreciation of faithful stewardship will re-elect Franklin D. Roosevelt."

While their declarations were being put before labor rallies in different sections of the country, however, some statements both from conservative Democrats and Republicans were presenting the opposite view.

Henry Breckinridge, who was an assistant secretary of war under Woodrow Wilson, issued a statement in New York calling for "cooperation of all elements of the American electorate" in opposition to supervision of the American system by the alien-minded adventures who have seized the machinery of government."

He said the Democrats in congress and elsewhere should recapture control of the party from those whom he asserted had repudiated all 1932 promises and departed from all principles and traditions of the party.

Reply From Republicans

His statement almost coincided with a Republican national committee announcement charging the Roosevelt administration with debauching the public service by "filling every possible office from the highest in the gift of the president, such as cabinet officers, to the lowest in the government, such as day laborers and charwomen, with individuals who had no other recommendation than the endorsement of Democratic politicians."

Hardly was the ink dry on the Republican statement when the following appeared in the New York Times:

Campbell Hits 300 MPH on Utah Salt

English Speedster Beats Own Record on Desert Course

Record Performance Follows 240 MPH in Trial Run on Monday

FASTEST ON LAND

Master of the Bluebird
Hangs Up Another
Sporting Record

BOONEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah—(AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell, England's man of super speed, bettered his own world's record for land speed Tuesday on the salt beds of Utah with an average of 290.875 miles per hour.

240 on Test

BOONEVILLE SALT FLATS, Utah—(AP)—Sir Malcolm Campbell, smiling happily, climbed out of his giant Bluebird Monday after a trial run on the salt-beds of Utah and announced he would attempt Tuesday to better the world's land speed record of 276.816 miles an hour he already holds.

The 36-year-old Englishman put his 2,500-horsepower machine up to 240 miles an hour on the 13-mile straightaway. The performance satisfied him.

"It's a splendid record," Campbell said. "I had a better ride than on any at the same speed."

He was referring to Daytona Beach, Fla., where last February he posted his record to the present mark of slightly more than four and a half miles a minute.

Gazing out over the level flats, sparkling under a torrid sun that shot the thermometer up around the 100 degree mark, Sir Malcolm said:

"It is funny driving here. You feel like you were on a lake covered with ice and snow. But I'm tickled to death with the course and I feel so good I wouldn't be afraid to sock that 'Louie Baer' (Max Baer) on the nose right now. Of course, I wouldn't wait to see how he liked it."

Several thousand spectators, many motoring here from distant points, assembled three-quarters of a mile from the 200-foot wide track, scraped smooth and centered by a foot-wide line oiled in the salt. This line enabled Sir Malcolm to run true during the dash. He deviated once, he said, when he took his eyes off the road to look at his instruments.

He found the altitude of more than 4,000 feet gave him quicker acceleration, and wind resistance was considerably less than at sea level. The rarified atmosphere, however, affected his air brakes and they were of little value to him in the slowdown.

When he struck the start of the mile stretch where the American Automobile Association officials will record his time, he was traveling more than 230 miles an hour. He ranged up to 240 miles, which, he said, was "only coasting."

President Winds Up Legislative Study—To Sign No More Bills

THE NEW DEAL IN WASHINGTON

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

WASHINGTON.—When Congress reconvenes next January, the Senate probably will turn to two of its most important bills.

Well, boys, what next?

The gentleman addressed will be Burton K. Wheeler of Montana and Robert F. Wagner of New York, whose legislative achievements, when you count up the score, stand out above all others in this second Congress of the New Deal.

Wheeler, a "radical" from the far west, reached a position of power as chairman of the interstate commerce committee and used it for all it was worth, pandering through more than half a dozen important measures.

Wagner, the former immigrant boy and Tammany judge, fathered the economic security act, the labor disputes act, and railroad pensions.

Other leaders, including those practical politicians officially charged with

283 Dead Is Toll on Holiday Roads

Rain, and Caution of Death in High Circles, Holds Down Total

By the Associated Press

Fewer than 300 automobile fatalities were recorded Tuesday in the United States during the triple Labor day week-end holiday.

The National Safety Council had predicted the death toll would mount to between 350 and 400, and described week-ends as "death's favorite holiday."

Rain in many sections was one factor which tended to reduce the number of deaths.

Figures early Tuesday placed the death list at 283.

Public Cautioned

NEW YORK—The violent deaths of Queen Astrid of the Belgians and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes in auto crashes brought caution to the highways over Labor Day, countrywide reports indicated Monday night. The death toll was 170 nearly three an hour, but the figure was far below the expected 350 to 400.

The smashup in which Mrs. Ickes, wife of the secretary of the Interior, was killed took its second victim at Santa Fe, N. M., when Frank Allen, called the "best driver in the world," died in a hospital.

New York city's week-end total was brought up to four when a man was killed in a collision at 4 p. m. Roads surrounding New York claimed several victims.

Two Brooklyn residents, Morris Goodman, 46, and his son, Edwin, 24, were killed at Dutchess, Ct., as Gov. Wilbur L. Cross proclaimed "street and highway month." A policeman was killed at Albany. A CCC worker was pitched to death when an army truck skidded off the road at Salamanca, N. Y.

The previous heaviest rainfall was recorded June 18 when 1.03 inches fell.

Early fall gardens and feed crops greatly benefited from the rainfall Monday and Tuesday.

Rising Living Cost Seen as G.O.P. Aid

Col. Frank Knox Declares It Will Be "Fatal" for Democrats

CHICAGO—(AP)—Col. Frank Knox said Monday "higher living costs" and "higher taxes" would aid a Republican victory in 1936 because they were "unfairly fatal for the party which has to defend them."

Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News and frequently mentioned as a possible Republican candidate, told newsmen:

"It costs $1.80 today to buy the same necessities you could have purchased three years ago at your corner grocery for $1.00. This is the kind of economic fact which everyone can understand. Its influence upon the voter is tremendous."

"At the same time," he said, "the average weekly wage has gone down."

Urging Republicans to adopt the platform of 1932 which he said President Roosevelt had "repudiated," the speaker declared that such a platform puts the higher cost of living issue and its "twain," higher taxes, would pave the way for an "unprecedented victory" at the polls in November next year.

20,000 Crack Ethiopian Troops Leave for Front; Total 75,000

Emperor Selassie Believed to Be Keeping 50,000 More in Reserve as Italians Approach

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia—(AP)—

The vanguard of 20,000 picked Ethiopian troops ordered to the eastern frontier entrained Tuesday at the capital.

Emperor Selassie is reported already to have 75,000 troops in the front lines and 50,000 in reserve in the eastern sector.

Arbitrator Favors Italy

PARIS, France—(AP)—Nicholas Politis, neutral arbitrator on the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation commission, said Monday night that reports from Geneva saying the commission had decided the Ethiopians were the aggressors in the Italo-Ethiopian war were "premature."

An informed source close to the commission, however, said "the whole weight of the evidence has been against Ethiopia from the start and Italy undoubtedly will win the decision."

The commission conferred twice Monday and will meet again in a final session. Politis said a decision will be drafted late Tuesday and published in Geneva Wednesday.

A Reuters News Agency dispatch from Geneva said Politis had decided the Ethiopians were aggressors and that moral satisfaction must be given to Italy. His decision was reported to comprise three other points:

1. Regarding the question of indemnity, it will first be necessary to establish the question of territorial sovereignty.

2. A commission should be set up to decide a frontier line.

3. If the commission does not reach an agreement, the question shall be submitted to the Permanent Court of Justice at The Hague.

Laval and Eden

Premier Pierre Laval of France and Britain's Anthony Eden tried and failed Monday to close the gap between Britain's insistence upon "upholding the League of Nations" in the Italo-Ethiopian situation and France's willingness to consider Italy's East African movement a "colonial operation."

Laval refused to concur in Eden's version of the three power conference conclusions which the British minister brought from London and intended to present to the League Council. He reminded Eden that France is determined to avoid sanctions or threats of League pressure upon Italy and to retain the friendship of Italy.

A British spokesman added that Laval, in refusing to sign Eden's report which he called "too strong," indicated he would make a separate report.

Eden flew across the channel Monday morning. After going to Geneva with Laval, he will go to Aix les Bains to see Prime Minister Stanley

Baldwin of England.

It was understood that Eden has instructions to uphold the League covenant "to the limit" in conformity with the British cabinet's original stand.

Eden's Explanation 'Accepted'

Before the "smell of oil" intruded through Ethiopia's grant of a big concession to a British subject representing an American corporation, Eden wanted to blame Italy for failure of the Paris efforts to prevent war.

Oil played little part in Monday's conversation. Eden communicated the British view concerning the concession and Laval accepted it.

The informant also said "it is unlikely Francis M. Rickett's name will be mentioned at Geneva. Britain and France consider that incident closed. The British government cannot find any British capital in the company."

Furthermore, article 25 of the concession agreement says: "the company shall remain American or Ethiopian."

"Britain has no economic interests whatever in Ethiopia except Lake Tana. If the government had known of the Rickett deal, it would have refused support."

Rickett, in the past, has been interested in companies with Italian capital, is said, and British Oil Development, Ltd., which is Rickett's chief source of income is predominantly Italian.

After Eden's visit, Laval gave Ambassador Vittorio Corbelli of Italy a report of the conversation.

"Must Support Concessions"

PARIS, France—(AP)—Senator Pope of Idaho declared Monday the United States government will be obliged to support the new concessions to American interests in Ethiopia.

The senator made the declaration as he was leaving for Geneva. He based his contention on "the precedent set up at the time of the Boxer rebellion and by the action in Nicaragua where American soldiers and sailors were sent to protect American rights."

The senator reiterated his belief that the new American neutrality declaration was "of little value."

He said the United States would eventually join Great Britain if she went to war with Italy over the attempted ravishing of Ethiopia.

Pope said:

"The oil concession was freely negotiated between American interests and a sovereign power. The concession is perfectly legal and stands on firm ground. Americans have understood since the Revolutionary war that they carried the backing of their government when they carried American commerce and industry overseas."

400 Projects for State to Capital

Sharp Goes to Washington for Early Action on WPA Allotments

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—Floyd Sharp, assistant state administrator of the WPA, leaves Tuesday night for Washington with 400 additional proposed WPA projects for Arkansas.

The new list will be presented to the Federal Allotment Board and an effort will be made to obtain early action on them.

1 1/2 Million for Works

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt allotted Tuesday $696,364 work relief funds to cover 45 per cent of the cost of eight non-federal Public Works Administration (PWA) projects.

Three Arkansas allotments for sewage systems are included.

Mr. Broadway went to the nearest telephone and summoned officers for an investigation. Deputy Sheriff R. O. Robins, Reinald Bearden and Revenue Agent C. C. Mitchell investigated.

The negro, with a hole in his right side and his lower limbs crushed, died soon after the accident.

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—The liner Limon, one of the fleet of vessels which groped through a heavy haze in search of the steamship Dixie, which pounded onto a reef, reported early Tuesday afternoon that it had reached the side of the stricken ship.

Captain Holdt, of the Limon, reported that the Dixie is pinned against the north end of French Key, about 60 miles south of Miami.

MIAMI, Fla.—(AP)—Hampered by hurricane-churned seas, rescue ships labored Tuesday to reach the side of the palatial Morgan liner Dixie, aground on Cary's reef with 369 persons aboard.

From the oil tanker Reeper came a wireless message indicating she had reached a position near the stricken vessel, was standing by, and, weather permitting, would attempt to contact the Dixie Tuesday morning.

Desperately striving to aid the $100-ton liner were another tanker, the Watertown; the United Fruit liner Platanos, and the Coast Guard cutter Carybasset, which cleared Port Everglades after being held in the harbor by raging seas.

Final War Bonds Called in by U. S.

To Refund 4th Liberties, Bearing 4 1/4 Interest, at 2 3/4 Interest

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A $1,750,000,000 financing operation, designed both to wipe out the last of the World War's Liberty bonds and raise new cash, was announced Monday night by the Treasury.

It offered to trade new securities for $1,250,000,000 of old debts—the final block of the $8,000,000,000 of Liberties which helped finance war costs. Secretary Morgenthau also asked the public for $500,000,000 in new money to build up the Treasury's cash.

Conversion into new obligations or currency of the $1,250,000,000 of Fourth Liberties which have been called for redemption October 15, will erase from government records the last of approximately $25,000,000,000 of war securities. But the public debt still will include about $15,000,000,000 of war costs.

Morgenthau's September 15 third quarter financing offer was: Holders of the maturing 4 1/4 Fourth Liberties may exchange them for 10-12 year 2 3/4 per cent bonds, 3 1/2 year 1 1/2 per cent notes, or cash. The 1 1/2 per cent notes also are open to cash bids of $500,000,000, but the bonds may be obtained only on a trade-in basis.

Experts said the conversion bond offering bore the lowest interest rate of any similar government security, despite the money-market's recent fall-off to subscribe fully to a $100,000,000 of 1 1/2 per cent four-year paper.

The $500,000,000 cash borrowing was offered on a straight subscription basis, an abandonment of the recent practice of auction selling to the highest bidder.

Completion of the conversion of $8,000,000,000 of Liberties into lower interest rate securities was estimated to save more than $100,000,000 annually in interest charges on that portion of the public debt.

The new cash loan will push the public debt at least temporarily to a new all-time peak—more than $29,500,000,000.

The exchange offering is the last that will be extended holders of the Fourth Liberties.

Longer Country Life Refutes Popular Gag

That perennial gag that life in the country isn't really longer than life in the city—it only seems so—will have to be packed away among many false wisecracks. For figures actually show that people who live in rural districts live an average of four to five years longer than those in the cities.

Statistics recently compiled for the white population of the United States up to 1930 show that a child born in a city has an expectation of life of 56.73 years, but if born in the country, its expectancy of life is 62.09 years. A girl born in a city has an expectancy of 61.05 years, while one born in the country may reasonably expect to live 65.09 years.

Apparently the chance of living a long time depends to some extent on the degree to which the community concerned is industrialized.

By the time the individual has reached 50 years of age, his life expectancy also changes, depending on whether he lives in the country or in the city. A white man 50 years old, living in the city has a life expectancy of 19.73 years more; if he lives in the country, it is 23.99 years. Correspondingly, a white woman living in the city has a life expectancy of 22.4 years at 50 years of age, but living in the country, 24.77 years.

Interestingly enough, a classification of life expectancy by states shows a similar relationship to industrial conditions.

For example, a person born in New York has a life expectancy at birth of 57.84 years, while one born in Kansas or South Dakota has a life expectancy of from 63 to 64 years.

Such states as Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Idaho, Washington and Oregon give the individual a life expectancy at birth of more than 60 years, while New York, Maryland, Pennsylvania and South Carolina give a life expectancy of under 58 years.

Such other far western states as Nevada, Colorado, New Mexico and Arizona have low rates of life expectancy in spite of a low degree of industrialization. It is pointed out, however, that these states have a high percentage of Mexican population, whose mortality rates are regularly above those of other people classified as white.

Were it not for the high degree of development of modern sanitation and hygiene which have occurred during the past two or three decades, the death rates in such industrial states as Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and New York would be far higher even than they actually are.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTION

She Tried to Curb Two Roving Males.

The conflict between the restless male and the conservative female who likes an orderly and reasonably quiet life is discussed with a good deal of wit in Stella Gibbons' new novel, "Embury Heath."

Miss Gibbons introduces us to three sprightly young English people at the moment when they become orphans. They had seen this conflict at close range, and had suffered by it. Their father, a London doctor, had been a rake, a drunkard, and a profligate. Their mother had striven for years to keep him to the mark, had failed, and at last had died heart-broken.

As the story opens, the father has just died and the youngsters—two brothers and a sister—are on their own.

Anxious to get away from busybody relatives who want to run things, they set up housekeeping together in a little cottage, and for a few weeks they have an idyllic life. But eventually the brothers begin to discover that there is fun to be had in the byways of London, and they set out to have it; and sister, anxious to save them from papa's fate, fights a losing fight and feels pretty miserable—until, at last, she decides to let them have their fling and be done with it, and stops worrying. This story could be either dreary tragedy or light farce-comedy. Miss Gibbons has neatly hit a middle course, and the result is a book which is both witty and tender—an intelligently told, emotionally appealing novel.

"Embury Heath" is published by Longmans-Green for $2.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Grandparents Are Wise—From Own Experience.

I have read it and wept—the little verse by W. H. Drummond, quoted by George Doran in his "Chronicles of Barabbas":

"But little Batesee, please don't forget
"I'd rather you're stayin' de small boy
"Yet
"So chase de chicken and mak dem scarce,
"And do wot you like wit your ole gran'pers,
"Far w'en you're beeg feller he won't be dere,
"Leetle Batesee!"

I have a leetle Batesee and a tiny Batesee, and I cannot watch them through life. I won't be there. I wonder, were we to be there, one of us who already has our second edition of the advantage of being professional. He has never—on very seldom—observed the effects of his methods, and then, out of the "amateur" class, begun all over again.

Grandparents are actually more professional than parents. They have lived and learned. Sentimentalists if you like, but they have seen a few things too. For instance, they see Son John taking little Davy over the coals day after day because he is lazy. Or Daughter Margaret worried and fretful because little Irene is secretive—"sly" her mother calls it. One grandchild is untidy, another too bossy, another too cowardly.

Recall Like Worries. And then Grandma and Grandpa remember how each of their six children worried them in precisely the same way, but at 20 and 30 all had mellowed into fine, responsible men and women. They have seen what the sandpaper of life does. Little Batesee has chased his fowl, found it funny, but futile, has looked around and learned as his mother and found kindness more to his credit.

And so they are content. They are silent, unless the admonishing of their children reaches the point of unreason. They may even do a bit of admonishing themselves, but they know, too, that an average, normal, happy home life will build into the fabric those qualities of character they would have them. Each could write his own book of psychology—as experts must be. And yet the amateurs (parents) too often say, "Grandparents are too old-fashioned. They don't understand."

Dinner Conversation. The big game hunter found himself new to a charming girl at dinner. He told her how, having fired his last shot at a wounded and infuriated lion, he was forced to throw away his rifle and swim over a crocodile-infested creek to safety.

"Yes," said the girl brightly, "I'm awfully fond of bathing, too."

A cold gale strikes us with a greater force than a warm wind of the same velocity, cold air being heavier than warm air.

American bison are on the increase. There are now 4400 of these animals in the United States and 1700 in Canada.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

By Alicia Hart

Reconditioning Summer Skins

The golden brown suntan of which you're justly proud all summer simply isn't flattering with dark fall clothes. A black dress—always a good deal of its glamor when skin that shows above it isn't white. Furthermore, this season's dressy, feminine fashions call for rather fragile beauty that has no boisterous, outdoor look about it.

Remember, of course, that it is a bad idea to try to remove a coat of suntan too quickly. Use only mild bleaches and have a good deal of patience. The tan will disappear soon enough anyway. You should be concerned mainly with the texture of your skin which no doubt, isn't as attractive as it was in June before you started your campaign for copper tones.

Skin Needs Food

Plan to use a rich nourishing cream each morning as well as at night. When you have cleaned face and throat, smooth on a generous layer of the heavier cream, and with a patting or fingertips, pat upward and outward from base of the throat to hairline until some of the cream has been absorbed.

When you have finished, remove the remaining cream with soft tissues, apply a cold skin tonic or plenty of ice water, and put on street makeup. At night, take off only the excess, allowing some of the cream to stay on while you sleep.

If you use bleaching cream at night, put it on after nourishing cream has been applied, put it in and removed carefully. In the morning, the bleach takes the place of nourishing cream.

Bleaching lotions often tend to make skin rather dry and, for this reason always should be followed by plenty of tissue cream.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Two young officers, about to be sent overseas, go to spend brief furloughs with their families. BRIAN CHAMBERS goes to a parental home where he sees his wife, GWYN, and their 2-year-old child, ELAINE. GEORGE WOODSON goes to his modest little home for a visit with his adoring wife, ELEANOR, and his baby, RUTH. Each man makes the wish that his child will have whatever it takes to make her happy.

Eighteen years later Ruth, a beautiful, high-spirited girl, now an orphan, is in search of work. During a storm she seeks refuge in a mysterious old mansion in the midwestern town of Worthingville. Faintly from hunger, she is carried upstairs by a queer old woman and a young man named JOHN McNEILL. Ruth is called "Miss Elaine" by the old woman. Meanwhile Elaine Chambers is attending fashionable "Graycastle College" in the east and at a secret meeting of "The Terrible Ten" she vows to win a declaration of love from her first sweetheart, John McNeill of Worthingville, whom she has not seen since childhood.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER VII

A HARASSED looking person, whose name was Jane Emerson and whose duties were secretarial, rapped softly on the door of the most imposing suite in the Graycastle dormitories.

"Come!" sounded a voice from within. The invitation came from Madame Leskhi, the school's dean, who was anxiously awaiting her.

When Miss Emerson had entered she dropped wearily into a chair and kicked off her slippers. "Well," she said with an unhappy sigh, "I've done it. I followed them to the birch grove, and I crouched there in the dark for an hour, listening to them." She seemed infinitely depressed.

Madame Leskhi, a tall, thin, commanding woman with white hair, nodded approvingly. "Your feet are wet," she replied soothingly. "Come nearer the hearth. I had the fire built especially for you." She made her visitor comfortable with the typical wiles of a European woman who has an ax to grind. "I have hot water ready for tea. And some very nice sandwiches and caviar," she added impressively.

"Don't think you can cheer me up by feeding me," Miss Emerson sniffed gloomily. The severe gray dinner gown that she wore accented the grayness of her steady eyes. She was the sort of person who persists in looking tailored, even in chiffon. Tonight, as usual, her hair lay in sculptured neatness above her fretted brow. "If you think you can spy on a bunch of girls—even young fools like those—you're still keep your self respect, and be grimly mistaken, my friend and employer!"

"It's for the good of the student body that you did this, dear Jane," Madame said reasonably. Madame Leskhi was the person who had molded Graycastle College into its present shape. Before that trip to Ohio, of course, she had been on legitimate leave when she does it.

"And God knows what harm she'll do," said Jane Emerson. "It isn't as if these were boarding school girls we're dealing with. They're grown young women. They're mature enough and ruthless enough to wreck any lives in their path if they choose. Especially Elaine," she added pointedly.

"America has enough fashionable preparatory schools," she pointed out, "and enough blue-stocking colleges. What America does not have is a women's college like an exclusive country club. Let us double our charges, do away with scholastic entrance requirements, offer a two-year course, and specialize in the languages, the arts and athletics. I predict that in time a diploma from Graycastle will be more eagerly sought than a presentation at Saint James!"

Ruth paused on the verge of sleep to plan how she would slip away in the early morning.

"The new generation of young buds wanted to be educated in a place where one dressed for dinner on an evening and could specialize in fencing, in preference to math."

"These are the girls who were there," said Miss Emerson, and she named them. "I saw each face by flashlight."

"Our school's beauties, as it happens," remarked Madame. "It doesn't just happen," Miss Emerson told her. "They are bred to the charmed circle of the 'Terrible Ten' because they are good-looking, popular and—would you believe it?—indifferent to their grades! It's a sort of requirement among them that passing marks must satisfy."

"I knew there was evil in this thing!" Madame Leskhi exclaimed agitatedly. "A secret society of the most venomous sort!" She put down her cup and began to pace the floor. "Tell me all, Jane!"

"Of course I'll tell you all," answered Jane Emerson impatiently. "I wasn't snooping around in that beastly damp woods to amuse myself." And she talked for half an hour while Madame Leskhi listened.

Down the corridor a door opened softly, then closed.

"It's Elaine Chambers getting home," said Madame unhappily. "I shan't be able to prevent her taking that trip to Ohio, of course. She'll be on legitimate leave when she does it."

"And God knows what harm she'll do," said Jane Emerson. "It isn't as if these were boarding school girls we're dealing with. They're grown young women. They're mature enough and ruthless enough to wreck any lives in their path if they choose. Especially Elaine," she added pointedly.

RUTH WOODSON became conscious that the old woman was feeding her with a spoon. Feeding her something hot and savory. As each spoonful reached her mouth she swallowed like a hungry bird and waited for more. "It's good!" she managed to say. "It's chicken broth!"

The old woman spoke to some one standing in the door, out of range of Ruth's vision. "She's all right now, Mr. John. You can go home. It's as you said. She's hungry. Her mother used to do them diet stunts too!"

"If you need me tonight," he said, "call. My room's still on this side of the house." He ran down the stairs, making a cheerful clatter as he went. Ruth's thoughts went after him, seeking she knew not what. "His name is John," she thought simply.

Presently she said, "I'm stronger than you think. Let me sit up and feed myself."

The old woman humored her, propping her with two pillows. She drew a small table close to the bed and placed the tray on it. "Here's milk-toast," she said, "and two cold eggs. And here's hot tea in the teapot. I hope you don't object to the candlelight, Miss Elaine. Candles are all I've had here for four or five years now."

"I like candles," answered Ruth. Even in her bewilderment she saw clearly that she was being mistaken for someone else. For some one named Elaine. Nevertheless she ate the meal, happily and ravenously. Fate was being kind to her tonight, and when Fate is kind one must accept with thankful heart and not question.

The old woman said, "I hate to worry you by telling you this, Miss Elaine, but you must have left your bags on the train."

"I came off without any baggage," replied Ruth. "I had to buy a change of clothes on the way. They're in those parcels I was carrying—" She was seized with a fit of sneezing, and the old woman left off, clicking her tongue to look worried.

"No bags!" she exclaimed. "And you're taking cold to boot! You shouldn't have let the taxi driver put you out before I got to the door. I'd have brought you a cape and umbrella. Was the train draughty?"

"I didn't come by train," Ruth answered. "I came by bus. I got off just in front of the door."

"Heaven help us!" the old woman cried out. "And your late grandfather's railroad running right through the city!"

Ruth made no reply. She was thinking. "So my grandfather owned a railroad! Well! I'm somebody right out of the top drawer!" She lay back against the pillows and surveyed her surroundings with interest.

The room was large and high-ceiled and elegant, with four long windows curtained in swags and faded chintz. An old brussels carpet covered the floor in a flower and ribbon design of faded blue and rose. The furniture was hand-carved rosewood.

The old woman said, "I see you're not in the room, Miss Elaine. You'll remember it's the one you stayed in that summer you were 12. The last visit you made to us, it was because your granny died the summer after and then your Uncle Duncan was taken away—"

"Yes," said Ruth. "I believe I could go to sleep now."

The old woman said contritely, "I'm tired you out with my talkin'. I'll go now and let you get into your nightgown. The bathroom's through that door—it's special for this room. I'll leave the bell beside you and if you want anything you can ring."

Ruth said, "Thank you for being so kind to me. I can't tell you how good it is to be here tonight. Never were sincerer words spoken. The old woman bent and kissed her clumsily on the forehead. "Call me 'Penny' like you used to," she requested.

"Of course!" replied Ruth. "Good night, Penny."

Afterward when she lay comfortable and warm in the great bed, passing on the verge of sleep to plan how she would slip away in the early morning, she felt a stab of regret to think she had deceived a half-blind old woman who had been made glad by her coming.

lives and as George Norris will live long after he is gone.

Scanned Easy Way.

In nearly every other session, Wheeler has collapsed physically. This year he was far too busy. Eight months ago some of his best friends were telling him he shouldn't take the interstate chairmanship. He was too temperamental and high-strung, not very rugged, and probably incapable of standing the pace.

He didn't know how to work hard and hadn't better take the chairmanship of Indian affairs instead? What he told them to go take a dive. Both he and Wagner owe a lot to the leadership in the White House and the fact that Roosevelt had borne misfortunes. But the going was usually rough and pressure against progressive legislation was powerful.

Here's Outstanding Record.

Wheeler got so much publicity from the Wheeler-Rayburn public utilities holding company bill that his other achievements are largely overlooked. His generalship is acknowledged by administration leaders as the most important congressional factor in the victory on that bill, but you must also give him major credit—as fruits of many long days in his hot, stifling, smoky committee room—for:

1. Investigation of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the world's largest corporation, by the Federal Communications Commission at a cost of $750,000.

2. Investigation of railroad financing and reorganization. Bankers and managers who shepherded 55 roads (of 43,000 miles) into current bankruptcies and receiverships and now seek to profit from reorganization at investor expense will feel the heat of this one.

3. Railroad reorganization legislation broadening court authority to insure fairness, placing boulder committees under I. C. C. inspection and providing independent trustees to protect investors from Wall Street racketeers.

4. Forthcoming $150,000 investigation of food distribution, to find out how much packers, canners, millers, and other middlemen have been profiting.

Wagner Plays Big Role

In spare time, Wheeler has taken on such odd jobs as pushing the Guffey coal bill through his committee and blocking the money-sucking Bland-Comeland merchant marine subsidy bill.

Wagner shared honors with others on the economic security bill, though no man was more instrumental in letting it pass in satisfactory form. But the law creating a National Labor Relations Board with definite powers to enforce collective bargaining is his very own baby.

It passage was due primarily to Wagner's constant lobbying in Congress for it and his persistent banging at the White House door.

Of course Wheeler, with the holding company, railroad reorganization, and coal etc. laws, and Wagner, with his labor, security and retirement legislation, now must wonder what the supreme court will have to say.

Value of Experience

Robert: "I've a great mind to rock the boat and frighten you."

Marie: "Once a young man like you tried that with me and the boat upset."

Robert: "And what did you do?"

Marie: "I swam ashore and notified the coroner."

Cardinals 2 Games Ahead of Giants

Dean Brothers Win Double-Header--Detroit Goes 9 Games in Lead

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—The Dean brothers, Jerome and Paul, were credited with victories here Monday as the Cardinals won a double-header from Pittsburgh, 4 to 3 and 4 to 1, in the first contests of a month's stay in the home which the world champions hope will aid them win another National League flag.

To take the first game, the Cards came from behind in the ninth, tied the score and won in the sixteenth, when Jim Collins' single, the first sacker's only hit of the game, Paul Dean entered the game in the tenth after Hallahan had retired for a pinch hitter. The victory was Paul Dean's 16th of the season and his second in three days.

Jerome (Dizzy) Dean was in no difficulty until the fifth inning of the second game when the Pirates bunched singles and a double for a run. A fourth baseman hit in this inning was wasted. It was the elder Dean's 23rd win this year. The game was called after the fifth because of darkness.

Pittsburgh led, 3 to 1, going into the last half of the ninth of the first game. With one out, Weaver walked and Durocher. Whitehead ran for Davis. Gilbert singled against the rightfield screen, scoring Whitehead, and Durocher scored when Vaughan fumbled Paul Waner's throw in. Hoyt replaced Weaver and retired the side. Frankie Frisch, card manager, was ejected from the first game in the 13th inning by Umpire Klem for protesting a called strike.

With the Giants rained out, the double victory increased the Cards' lead to two games.

Detroit 9 Games Ahead
DETROIT, Mich.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers took two games from the Chicago White Sox Monday to increase their American League lead over the New York Yankees to nine games.

Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe pitched the Bengals to a 6-to-1 victory in the morning game before 31,000 fans, the largest holiday morning crowd in the records of Navin Field. It was Rowe's 17th win of the season, and he helped win the game with a home run in the fourth inning with a man on base.

Elden Auker marked up his 15th victory in the afternoon encounter, featured by a home run by Pete Fox with two on base in the seventh inning.

Neither Johnny Whitehead, starting White Sox pitcher in the morning, nor Sam Jones, starter in the afternoon game, finished, and each was charged with a loss. Each went out after six innings, Whitehead being replaced by Salverson and Jones by Phelps.

The Tigers collected only six hits in the morning game but were aided by Chicago errors. They made 10 hits in the afternoon, seven off Jones and three off Phelps.

Of course all the group programs could not be attended, but each one tried to be present at that particular program suited to her own need. The instructions received will be very helpful in their future club work.

Mrs. Wilbur Jones entered a church dress in the state contest. The county council president being absent, Mrs. Eugene Goodlett took her place and gave the club's report.

The ladies were delighted with the airy tents and comfortable cots to which they could go after taps were blown at a late hour.

The means were lovely and greatly enjoyed also.

The main feature of recreation was the swimming pool, and during the swimming hours, most of the ladies were enjoying this sport and displaying their skill in swimming.

The happy group broke camp Thursday morning and enjoyed an educational tour.

Many points of interest were visited including Fort Roots where guides were furnished.

Cannon No Delegate, Legion Is Informed

LITTLE ROCK—(AP)—State Commander Vincent M. Miles said Monday night that the commander of the American Legion post at Hope had informed him that Curtis Cannon, who sought to interrupt National Commander Frank L. The most important measure vetoed by the president was that providing for an added compensation of approximately $7,000,000 for some 15,000 officers and soldiers who were in the volunteer forces of the United States in the Philippine Islands at the time of the treaty of peace with Spain in April, 1899.

In a memo attached to his veto, the president pointed out that these men were voted two months extra pay in 1899, were awarded a special medal, and received transportation and subsistence at government expense for the journey home in addition to full pay.

Gold Mine Owner Vanishes at Home

Search Launched in Colorado for Missing Joseph W. Aday, Jr.

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo.—(AP)—Into the labyrinth of gold and other mines in which he was interested, searchers went Monday seeking some clue to the puzzling disappearance of Joseph W. Aday, Jr., 33, geologist-capitalist.

Three days of investigation left Inspector I. B. Bruce, Colorado Springs criminologist, no nearer a solution of the case than he was Friday night when Aday dropped from sight while dressing for dinner at his home.

Bruce questioned several of Aday's friends but could find none who had seen him since the geologist left his home here. His wife, Mrs. Olivia Burns Aday, widow of James F. Burns, mining multimillionaire, said she was convinced her husband met with foul play.

She said she called to her husband after he had gone to his room following his arrival from his office about the usual hour Friday evening. He replied:

Labor Forecasts

publican statement before Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employees, told the national convention of that organization at Yellowstone Park:

"Not within the memory of anyone now living has the merit structure in the federal service been so beset by attacks, open and covert."

Statements by two cabinet officers also went into the day's political grist. Postmaster General Farley, just returned from a trip across the continent, said in New York that Mr. Roosevelt would win in 1936 by as wide a margin as he did in 1932. Secretary Perkins made a Labor Day radio speech about the benefits she said would accrue from the social security act.

Green, in his Canton, Ohio, speech, called for the 30-hour week, praised the Wagner labor disputes act, and social security, railroad retirement, Guffey coal and work relief laws.

Joseph Lister, noted surgeon, was the first to use antiseptics. He invented a three-lugger pump which threw a spray of carbolic acid over the surgeon and patient during an operation. Monkeys are trained to pick coconuts in Sumatra.

SOS

A policeman, making his rounds in the early morning, found an inebriated individual standing in a horse trough, waving his handkerchief over his head.

"Hey, what are you doing there?" asked the cop.

"Save the women and children first—I can swim."

Storyette

He had taken a correspondence course in pharmacy and was very proud of his diploma. One day he felt his throat getting sore and wrote out a prescription for himself, taking it to the local druggist.

"The druggist read it solemnly and asked, 'Is the dog very big?'"
